Surrounds

Casares, one of the most beautiful towns in Spain

Located in the province of Málaga and bordering the province of Cádiz, Casares is considered an icon of typical Andalusian white towns, narrow steep streets and whitewashed houses. Casares is also known as the hanging town, the layout of their houses and streets form an environment of a most peculiar landscape. It stretches across 160 square kilometres and has a population of about 6,000 inhabitants.

Besides being a charming town, its old town has been declared an historical artistic ensemble, its views are incomparable. At the highest point of Casares stands its Castle, with stunning views of the valleys, hills and coastal plains that are part of the Serranía de Ronda and continue to the Bay of Algeciras.

The tradition of Casares, its warm and temperate climate have made it into a popular tourist and residential destination. And, besides being considered one of the most beautiful in Spain, it also has 1.3km of beach, considered as one of the jewels of the Costa del Sol.

It is in an excellent location, just 15 minutes from Estepona and Sotogrande, 33 minutes from Marbella and has excellent access from the AP-7 motorway and the A7 main coastal road.

Gastronomy

Gastronomy:

A fusion of sea and mountain

The gastronomy is rich and varied. There is great variety of dishes: the puchero with "pringá", fried fish, gazpacho and its most popular dish, the moruna of sardines.

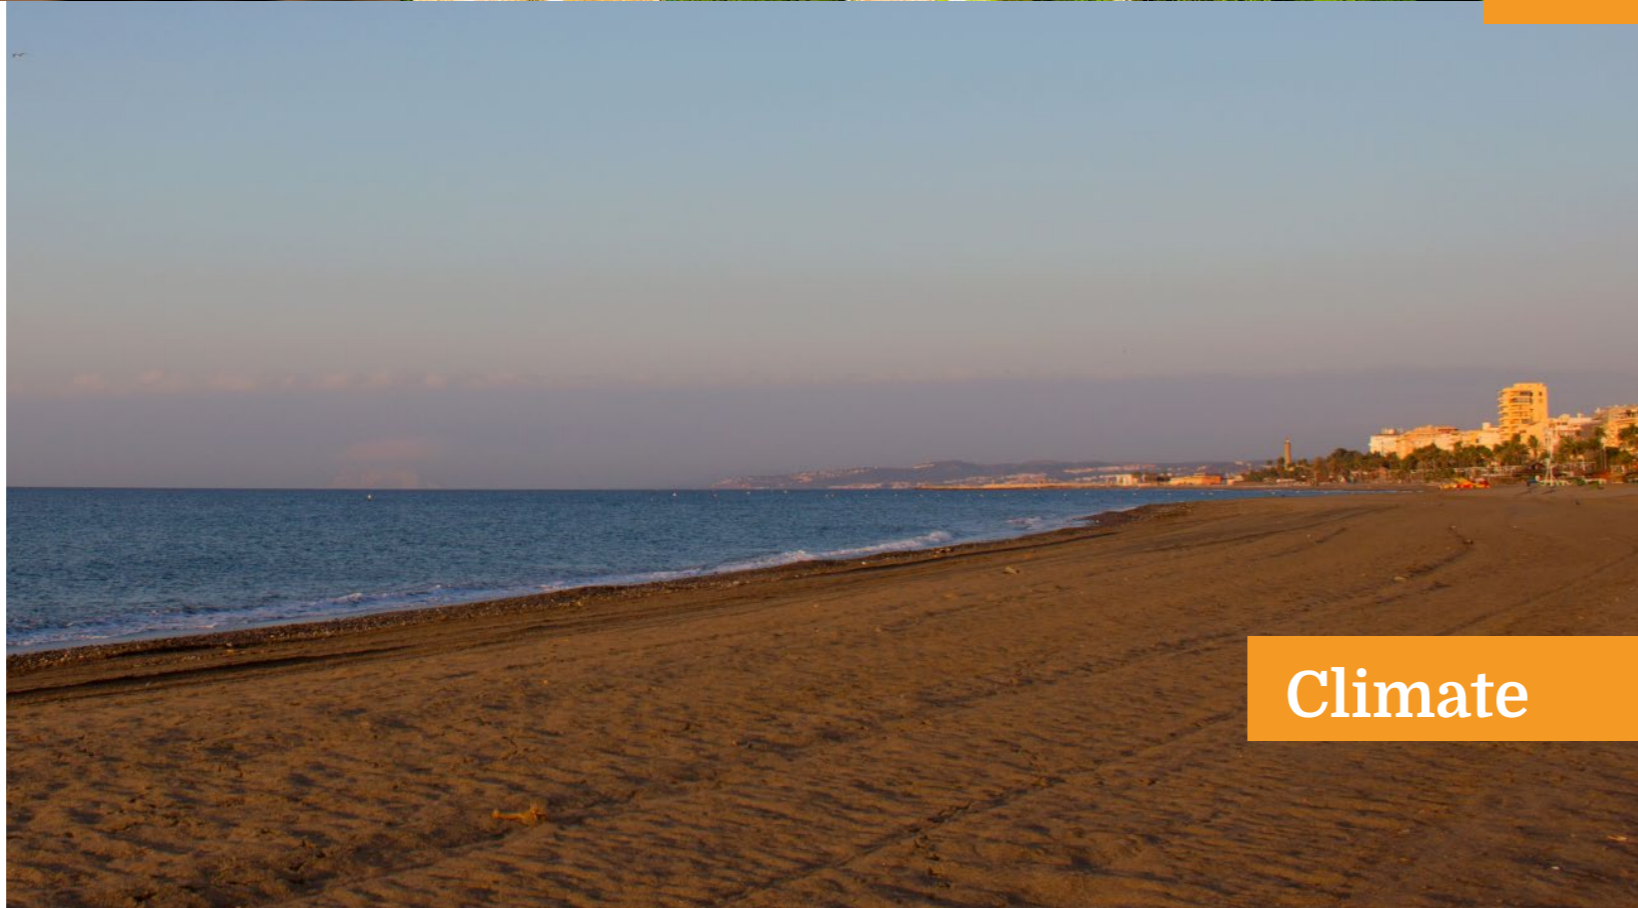

Leisure:

In addition to its beaches, Casares also counts on its beach clubs, marinas, golf courses, shops and nightlife in neighbouring towns such as Marbella, Puerto Banus and Estepona.

Culture

An ideal place with tradition and culture

Its traditional fair takes place in the month of August shortly after the fiesta for the more mature members of the town and known for its famous fandangos. Highlighting its medieval market and Easter with many significant events and religious processions.

This rating results in an estimated 80% energy saving and consequently an important economic saving, in comparison with dwellings that have an F energy rating.

Dwellings have a B Energy Rating which means a reduction in CO₂ emissions and a significant reduction in the energy demand of the building (heating, cooling and domestic hot water). The estimated saving, adding the annual energy expenditure of gas and electricity, could be up to € 700*.

* Calculated estimate of the energy saving of a typical 95m² house with a B rating with respect to a dwelling with an F rating, in accordance with the "Energy efficiency rating of buildings" published by the IDAE and the Ministry of Industry, Energy and Tourism in July 2015; and other regulations that complement and / or could replace it.  Guaranteed minimum savings in domestic hot water consumption (DHW) in the whole building, based on its location and the minimum occupation values according to the applicable current standard.
